

Archer 'disturbed' by fan's racist insults

NEW ZEALAND'S cricket authorities have pledged to step up security for Thursday night's second Test in Hamilton after England fast bowler Jofra Archer was racially abused by a spectator at Mount Maunganui's Bay Oval. Archer (left) took to social media a few hours after England had slipped to an innings defeat in the first Test, tweeting: 'A bit disturbing hearing racial insults today whilst

By LAWRENCE BOOTH battling to help save my team, the crowd was been amazing this week except for that one guy.' The England and Wales Cricket Board immediately launched an investigation, while New Zealand Cricket promised 'increased vigilance' at Hamilton's Seddon Park, where security staff will be encouraged to pay closer attention to comments from the crowd. It is understood some will wear plain clothes. Witnesses claim Archer stopped to speak to a steward as he left the field and headed for the pavilion following his dismissal for 30 on the last afternoon of the game, though New Zealand Cricket said security staff had been unable to locate his assailant. Police involvement has not been ruled out. Archer's tweet, as well as news of his abuse, took the England dressing-room by surprise. Approached by Sportsmail after he returned to the team hotel, he declined to comment. In a statement, the ECB said: 'NZC and ECB ensure that clear guidelines are in place at every venue so that watching a cricket match is safe and enjoyable for everyone.'

'Whilst this is a relatively isolated incident, there is no place for anti-social or racist behaviour within the game, and it is vitally important that all spectators feel able to come forward to report such behaviour and feel safe in doing so.' Speaking to ITV News, Archer's father, Frank, said: 'At this point my heart goes out to the person who feels like they have to behave that way.'
